What type of battery does Traxxas use?

Traxxas offers a wide assortment of battery sizes, voltages, and capacities, but when it comes to battery chemistry, they all fall into two categories: LiPo (Lithium Polymer) and NiMH (Nickel-Metal Hydride). NiMH batteries are made of 1.2 volt cylindrical cells, similar to the AA batteries we are all used to using.

Are Traxxas RC batteries a good choice?

Traxxas RC batteries are a good choice for any RC enthusiast. However, before buying a Traxxas RC battery, it's essential to know some things about RC batteries in general to ensure you buy the proper one for your RC car.

What is a Traxxas LiPo battery?

The cells are stacked and enclosed in a tough, semi-rigid wrap. Traxxas LiPo batteries are offered in 2-cell (7.4 volts), 3-cell (11.1v), and 4-cell (14.8v) configurations. LiPo batteries have greater "energy density" than NiMH batteries, meaning they have more voltage and capacity than a NiMH battery would of the same volume.

How to choose a Traxxas battery & charger?

Here's a quick guide to learning how to choose your Traxxas battery and charger. The main characteristics to take into account when choosing a battery are voltage (determined by the number of cells in the pack) and capacity (the amount of energy stored in the battery).

How many cells are in a Traxxas battery?

Traxxas NiMH batteries are offered with 6 cells (7.2 volts), 7 cells (8.4 volts), or 8 cells (9.6 volts). LiPo batteries are made of 3.7 volt flat cells. Traxxas LiPo batteries are offered with 2 cells (7.4 volts), 3 cells (11.1v), and 4 cells (14.8v).

How do I charge a Traxxas iD battery?

Simply press the "Start" button and the charger does the rest. This technology only works with Traxxas iD batteries; older, non-iD Traxxas batteries can be charged in manual mode by setting the battery type and charge rate. Traxxas Dual iD chargers can charge two batteries at the same time, even if they're different types and capacities.
