

How do I finance a solar system?

There are two ways to finance a solar system that someone else owns: Let's start with the solar lease. A solar lease is similar to a solar loan in the sense that both are forms of residential solar financing with zero down solar financing options. But the similarity pretty much stops there.

Should you pay for solar panels with a loan?

You still own your solar panels if you pay for them with a solar loan, which means you're eligible for valuable tax incentives like the federal solar tax credit, which saves you thousands of dollars on the cost of your solar system. Low-interest loans are not always the cheapest financing option.

Can I finance my solar energy system with a loan?

You can also finance your solar energy system with other types of loans such as a home equity loan and/or HELOC. We'll walk through all of your choices and explain why they do or don't make sense for your particular financial situation when it comes to paying for solar panels.

What is a PPA in solar financing?

The third option for financing a new solar system is to enter into a power purchase agreement (PPA). If you choose a solar loan, it's similar to financing a car or paying off your mortgage -- you'll be required to make fixed monthly payments over your loan term, which is usually anywhere from five to 25 years.

Should you finance a solar system?

There are several benefits to financing a solar system. First, it allows homeowners to go solar -- and start accumulating energy cost savings -- even if they don't have enough cash to purchase a system outright. Second, financing solar panels allows you to front-load your energy cost savings with a zero-down loan.

Should you buy a solar system or pay off a mortgage?

When deciding how to pay for solar panels, you have two main options: buying the system outright or financing it. With a cash purchase, you buy your system for its full cost upfront and have no payments moving forward. Alternatively, a solar loan requires fixed monthly payments over a term of five to 25 years, similar to financing a car or paying off a mortgage.
