The best eco friendly lunch containers are made of stainless steel, silicone and other non-toxic materials. This roundup includes bento box containers, reusable snack containers and insulated thermos containers to meet the needs of everyone in the family!

What are sustainable lunch containers made of?

Sustainable lunch containers are made from safe, non-toxic materials such as stainless steel, glass, silicone, or food-safe plastic. They are all durable, washable, and designed for repeated use.

What can you put in a lunch container?

Lunch containers can hold a variety of foods. You could stash potato or pasta salad, nuts, potato chips, pretzels, cheese cubes, edamame, or olives in them. The options are only limited by what you have at home.

Are the lunch boxes eco-friendly?

Yes, all of these lunch boxes are eco-friendly. They are durable, washable, and designed for repeated use (no single-use plastic containers). Any of these food containers will be a very sustainable choice for your eco-friendly lunch box packing needs.

What is the best insulated lunch box?

Our top pick is the Hydro Flask Insulated Lunch Box, with a single compartment and netting to pack your food, maximum insulation, an easy-clean interior, and four colors to choose from. For kiddos, we recommend the Bentgo Kids Lunch Box --it has separate compartments so food doesn't touch and comes in a wide array of patterns and colors.

What is the 4-cup size lunch container used for?

The 4-cup size lunch container is ideal for packing leftovers for lunch, such as chicken breast or salmon with a pile of roasted veggies.
